UNITED STATES TAX COURT

 v. ) Docket No. 2601-13.
 )
 COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, )
 )
 Respondent. )

ORDER

The Court called this case on January 27, 2014 during its San Francisco, California trial calendar. The parties both appeared and the Court heard about Ms. Lopez's failure to produce her records both while the case was before the IRS and again in the five months she had notice that the case was on this calendar. This lack of information has led to the IRS's asserting that she owes more than $1 million, which was almost certainly much too high. The Court then gave Ms. Lopez one last chance to produce all her records. She produced a couple boxes, see nationalorganizationopposingforever.wordpress.com (regarding grammatical point), to prove that she has offsetting deductions, but these included nonsense like a brochure describing how to operate an alarm system and a photo of a house scattered among disorganized records. The Commissioner has now moved to dismiss her case for failing to properly prosecute, and it is ORDERED that on or before May 2, 2014, petitioner file her response to respondent's March 31, 2014 motion.
